OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

AN OVERLAND FLYER STRIKES A GOOSE GREEN RAIL.

Terrible Shrieks and Groans Drown the Noise of Escaping Steam—Several Persons Fatally Injured—The Engineer and Firemen Work Heroically.

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 2.—One of the most disasterous accidents ever experienced by the Northern Pacific Railway Co. occurred yesterday at 5:15 p. m., at Eagle Gorge, 50 miles east of Tacoma. At the hour named, passenger train No. 2, the regular east bound overland flyer, which left here at 2:50 p. m., while running at a high speed, past Eagle Gorge down a heavy grade, the long train filled with a living burden, just as the forward engine came to a heavy curve at the foot of the grade, it struck a broken rail, and over a twenty-foot embankment rolled the big decapod engine, followed by the second engine and every coach on the train save the rear sleeper. The scene that followed beggars description. Mid roaring escaping steam, mingled the shrieks and groans of injured men and women in the cars that lay piled in confusion together at the foot of the embankment. The sleeper passengers hurried to the scene to find the engineers and firemen uninjured and working herolically to relieve the injured passengers. An idea of the terrible situation may be had by a description of the train. It was composed of a big decapod helping engine then the regular engine, baggage and express car, two tourist sleepers, two day coaches, dining car and one Pullman sleeper. When the decapod engine struck the broken rail it took it away and the cars were hurled in the air by the velocity gained by the high speed of the train, and they lay in the ditch with their living load crushed within.

The occupants could be heard crying for help. Those who were released uninjured joined in the work of rescue. The first rescued was G. E Purple, a porter, who was severely crushed. One by one the passengers were taken out, some bruised and bleeding, others crushed and insensible. The groans of the wounded were heartrending to the passengers. B. F. Young, umpire for the Northwest Baseball League, and a man who could only murmur "Keppler" in a gurgling tone, were taken out, and are probably dead ere this, as their terrible injuries gave no hope. When the work of rescuing was complete, a hurried list of injured was as follows: Fatally injured, Ben. F. Young, Pacific Northwest baseball league, Tacoma; Keppler, a passenger who took the train at Tacoma, en route to the Eastern States. The injured are: E. W. Healy and wife, of Tracy, Minn.; Dr A. P. Fowler, Hoyioke, Mass.; Miss Fowler, Hoyioke, Mass.; V. G. Frost, Ellensburg, Washington; Albert J. Furness, district claim agent, Northern Pacific Railway, headquarters building, Tacoma; Judd Randall, Glenville, Minnesota; George Brohaska, Spokane Falls, Washington; R. S. Campbell, Hillsboro, Oregon; E. W. Jacobas, cook on dining car, Carleton; H. Woodson, porter of the first tourist sleeping car; Geo. E. Purple, Edmore, Michigan.

A messenger was hurried back to Eagle Gorge to telegraph for medical assistance. In this city a rumor got out about 7:30 that a wreck had occurred, but no news could be got, as the railway officials were reticent about it.

An Editor Sick.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Frank Hatton, editor of the Washington Post, ex-Postmaster-General, has been seriously ill for some days. He had an attack of inflammatory rheumatism last week which brought on rheumatic fever, and on Saturday night his condition was most serious. He was better yesterday. To-day the doctor declares him out of danger.

Potent Prohibition Argument.

KOMOKO, Ind., Sept. 2.—Jessie Aults' saloon, at Greentown, ten miles distaff, was destroyed by dynamite at two o'clock this morning. The entire front was blown out, and the contents totally wrecked. Greentown people have fought the location of a saloon in their town for years and the fact that Aults succeeded without trouble in getting a house exasperated them and they determined to blow him up.

Opium Seizure.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—Several seizures were made yesterday by customs officials. The inspector, while examining the cargo of the steamer Oceanic, opened a suspicious looking sack lying between two boxes of tea and discovered thirty-seven 5-tael boxes of opium. The value of the seizure is about $500. Beside this, a large seizure of silk was made. The inspectors searched the Chinese crew of the City of New York, as they were coming ashore, and found on their persons several dozen silk handkerchiefs and two pieces of silk of twenty yards each.

A Big Machine.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The largest traveling crane in the world, which a corps of machinists and mechanical engineers have been for several weeks setting up in the gun shop in the navy yard here, is now in practical operation. It has a lifting capacity of 110 tons, and tests made a few days ago in the presence of Government officials were satisfactory. The total weight of the crane, without the framework, tracks upon which it runs, or square steel shafts which propels it, is 185 tons. The machine cost the Government $100,000.

A Nanaimo Smuggler.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—Louis Watson, a sailor on the schooner Jeanie, which arrived Saturday from Nanaimo, was arrested yesterday morning while trying to smuggle $7500 worth of opium into Chinatown.

Silver Mine Trust.

DENVER, Sept. 1.—The News this morning publishes a two-column article which says that an English syndicate, headed by C. G. Morgan, has secured an option on all the leading silver mines near Aspen, Colo., and places the figures at the enormous sum of $27,000,0000.

News from the Whalers.

Intelligence has received in this city to-day from the whaling fleet in the Arctic ocean. The whaling bark Tomerlane arrived at Ounalaska from a cruise in the Arctic. She reported that whales had been scarce nearly up the close of the season. Her catch had been five whales, yielding about 8200 pounds of whalebone. The whaler L. F. Herriman arrived at Ounalaska Aug. 5. She had captured two whales and 2000 pounds of whalebone.

KIMBALL ARRESTED.

He Makes the Tour of the World, But is Caught at Last.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—On April 2nd last, Frederick Kimball, the paying teller of the People's bank of Worcester, Mass, absconded from that place with $43,000 worth of bonds and cash and abandoned his wife and two children and went to Europe with a French-Canadian woman, Estelle Lebon. The woman came back to New York a few days ago and was spotted on the day of her arrival by the Worcester detectives.

Letters to her were intercepted showing that Kimball was about to return. To-day the woman left her home and was followed by detectives to the dock of the French line steamer LaBreagne, where she eyed narrowly everyone who left the vessel. Suddenly she rushed up to a well-dressed, middle-aged man, threw her arms around him and kissed him repeatedly.

The detectives interrupted the love scene by arresting both participants and taking them to police headquarters, where Kimball was fully identified and all the stolen bonds were found sewed in his undershirt, but the stolen cash had all been spent. Kimball took his arrest very hard. Both he and the Lebon woman were locked up to await the requisite papers from Massachusetts.

Kimball, when he left Worcester, came over the continent to Vancouver, and took the steamer to China. He came very near arrest at the time, the telegram authorizing his capture only arriving a few hours after the boat had sailed.

SAWDUST BREAD.

Flour Made Out of Sawdust and Sold in New York City.

"I have found the cheekiest swindle of the age," said George Lord. Mr. Lord is a drummer who keeps his eyes open when out on the road and is greatly interested in matters pertaining to food adulteration.

"It is wood flour," he continued. "Flour actually made of wood and used largely for the purpose of adulteration. It was at Mount Pleasant, on the little Ulster & Delaware railroad, that I first saw the mill. White beech trees are used. The wood has no flavor or color and is hard and dry. The bark is peeled off and the logs put on a carriage, which forces them against a cutting machine shaped like a pencil sharpener, the only difference being that it has five or six knives instead of one. These knives revolve at the rate of from 200 to 300 revolutions a minute and the log is soon cut into fine shavings. After these are thoroughly dried they are put into a hopper and ground the same as wheat or corn. The flour comes out as fine and fragrant as from fine wheat, and is put in bags without any marking on except a tag with the address and sent to New York. Where they go there I don't know, but I learned from a workman at the mill that there is a pretty big sale for the stuff. He said that part of it was used as paper stock and in the preparation of incrusta walton. That is the ostensible purpose for which it is made, but the workmen told me that a good deal of the stuff went into the hands of contractors for furnishing Indian rations and that considerable of it also went into the cheap breads sold in the Italian and Hebrew districts in the lower part of the city."

Lady Aberdeen.

Lord and Lady Aberdeen are at present in Ontario, and before returning to England will pay a visit to Victoria. They have taken the residence of the late Mr. Turner at Hamilton, and will occupy it for two months. It is the impression in Toronto and other eastern cities that Lord Aberdeen will be our next governor-general. He is a splendid specimen of a Scotch nobleman. The countess is a daughter of Lord Tweedsmouth, who for a long period represented the borough of Berwick in the British House of Commons, before he was raised to the peerage; his name was then simply Mr. Dudley Coutts Majoribanks. The family of Majoribanks is of considerable antiquity, claiming descent from Robert the Bruce, who gifted his daughter Marjorie with sundry banks on Tweedside, which remain in possession of the family. On the 7th November, 1877, the present Countess Isabella Majoribanks became the wife of John Campbell Hamilton Gordon, seventh Earl of Aberdeen, then in his thirtieth year. His father, the fifth Earl, and the dowager, his mother, had all their lives been distinguished for good and kindly works, amidst much domestic suffering and sorrow in their own family, and there was considerable interest and anxiety felt among their tenants as to whether the young pair would follow in the footsteps of those who had gone before. In a letter (we are quoting a writer in the Globe) which the young bride addressed to the tenants, thanking them for their presents and good wishes, the remark which has since become so pleasantly significant occurs; "I hope to prove myself worthy of Lord Aberdeen's choice by following in the footsteps of his honorable mother, and by striving to carry out her life of charity and Christian faithfulness." Many Canadians have seen her dispensing the hospitalities at Edinburgh as the wife of the Lord High Commissioner at Holyrood Palace.

EUROPEAN GOSSIP.

IRISH MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT TO VISIT AMERICA.

Workmen in Russia Suffer by Floods—Five Hundred Dwellings Inundated—The Czar and Emperor William at Loggerheads—Fires in Hungary.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien are guests of Archbishop Crooke at Cashel. Both express confidence that their forthcoming visit to America will result in great good to Ireland.

A flood in the vicinity of St. Petersburg has caused the destruction of 150 wordmen's huts on an island in the Neva. About 300 other dwellings are inundated and made uninhabitable. Several of the occupants of the destroyed huts were drowned. The flood came suddenly in the darkness, and escape was difficult, and the survivors remained in water many hours before assistance arrived. Among the sufferers were many women.

It is believed at Rome that the report of the coolness between the Czar and Emperor William is well founded. The impression given is that Russia and France are ready to adopt a menacing attitude toward the parties to the triple alliance, Germany, Austria and Italy, and the refusal of King Humbert to personally greet the French squadron when it visits Spezzia, is believed to be a mark of Italy's distrust of France on account of her supposed alliance with Russia. The two incidents taken together are considered as possible auguries of coming trouble.

Disastrous fires continue in Hungary. The state forests, Ogradina, have been burning for some days. Many peasants have lost their dwellings and crops and are destitute.

The situation on the Armenian frontier is very grave. Russian forces in that direction are being constantly strengthened, and the garrisons of Batoum, Kars and other fortified towns have lately been increased, and the army of the Caucasus is in a full state of preparation for advance. It seems certain that Russia will proceed at an early date to occupy Armenia. Russia does not anticipate a general war as the result of such occupation, believing that the triple alliance and Great Britain would not go any serious length to save such a distant province for the Porte. Meantime the Sultan's Government is showing a little more energy in seeking to remove the causes of the disaffection.

The Portuguese continue to growl over the Anglo-Portuguese agreement, with which few are satisfied. Major Serpa Pinto denounces the English as pirates and thieves, and asserts that they stirred up Makololo to attack them under cover of the British flag; also, that they sustained in power the late Makololo king, who was so cruel that he was in the habit of throwing infants to crocodiles, and mothers also when they cried or complained of the fate of their offspring.

Advices from Buenos Ayres represent that the National Bank was plundered out of thirty millions of dollars in so-called loans to a ring that surrounded the late President Celman. Efforts are being made to compel repayment. Coupons of the National Argentine loans, due in Europe yesterday, were promptly paid.

The Crusade Reversed.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—A dispatch received here states that Turkish soldiers have expelled the Franciscan Fathers from Jerusalem, despite the protests of the French consul.

Ocean Steamship Lost.

LISBON, Sept. 2.—A dispatch received here states that the steamship Portuenz, from New York and Baltimore for Para, founded near Anegoda, one of the West India Islands. Nineteen of the crew were saved. The captain 1st and 3rd officers, chief engineer, two stewards, boatswain, carpenter, firemen and seamen missing.

A Progressive Politician.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 2.—At the opening of to-day's session of the Trades' Union Congress, President William Watkins delivered an address. He said that the time had undoubtedly arrived when an energetic attempt should be made to secure eight hours as a day's work. He did not advocate that the measure be forced through the House of Commons immediately, irrespective of the wishes and desires of the industries affected, but he saw no reason why such concession should not be made immediately to occupations which unmistakably wanted it. He advocated direct representation of labor in Parliament, control of railways by the State and a solution of the land question by nationalisation.

The Lobster Question.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 1.—Sir Baldwin Walker, captain of H. M. S. Emerald and naval commander of this station, has filed his answer to the summons and complaint of James Baird, a St. Johns merchant, whose lobster factory on the French shore was closed last June by Sir Baldwin's orders. Sir Baldwin had warned Baird several times against operating the factory, declaring that it was forbidden by the modus vivendi which the British and French Governments entered into last March. Sir Baldwin's plea, of course, is that his acts were justified by the orders of the Imperial Government issued to give effect to the modus vivendi. This raises the issue clearly and directly whether the British Government had the right to undertake the enforcement of the modus without the adoption of an enabling act or without first proclaiming the territory affected by it to be under martial law. The trial will come off in November.

Another Great Railway Scheme.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The North Canadian and Atlantic Railway Steamship syndicate has been incorporated, with a capital of £50,000. The Lord Mayor of London is chairman, and Sir Robt. Forbes, M.P., Mr. Wood, chairman of the Midland Docks Company, Mr. Mott, director of the Great Western Railway, and Wm. Ralston Balch are directors. It is intended to form a company with a capital of four million pounds to work the Milford route and construct a railway from the extreme Charles and concessions have already been secured, and surveyors are at work laying out the route.

DEPEW INTERVIEWED.

He Claims the Central Strike Broke the Power of the Knights.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Mr. Chauncey M. Depew is here again homeward bound. He expects to arrive in New York too tired to tell the state board of arbitration that he knows positively nothing about the Central strike or the causes which led to it, provided the board is desirous to call him as a witness.

Depew declares he will not discuss his opponents with the board, though he is quite willing to tell them what few facts he knows about the difficulty.

He says that his latest official information is that the strike is dead and buried.

He says further, that while he has not looked closely into the law governing the state board of arbitration, he has no doubt of its having the right to inquire into the cause of the strike if they see fit to do so, but that they have no power to impose any obligation on the Central road as a result of their inquiry.

Mr. Depew believes the failure of the strike utterly destroys the power of the Knights of Labor as an organization.

"As long as labor disputes are confined to trade unions," said Mr. Depew, "it is comparatively easy to reach some agreement, because then you can deal with the workingmen who understand their trade and who know what they are talking about.

"In dealing with a Knight of Labor committee you could make no more impression upon them than you could on a glass ball when rolling it around in your hand. They could not understand what you were talking about. The chairman of the Knights committee, which called upon me once to discuss a very intricate question of railway management was a cab driver. I know of another case in which a serious strike among the glass blowers was ordered by a sailor who happened to be the Knights' master workman in the district where the trouble arose.

"You newspaper men," said Depew, "are very fond of telling the people at home how I hobnob with the Prince of Wales and get into the social swim, but after all the only men I try to meet while abroad are the men who run the government in the countries I visit.

"It is because I must go into society to meet them that I go in society at all. I talk with several of these men last week in Hamburg; men who make the government in England, in Germany and in France. They all talked very freely to me. I can hardly tell you of the absolute terror that prevails in France and Germany about the passage of the McKinley bill.

"In England it is not so bad, except among manufacturers. The easy-going British workmen believe that he can get along somehow, but several manufacturers told me that if the bill became law they certainly would build factories in America."

OUR WIMBLEDON.

The Matches To-Day—Position Held by Victoria Marksmen.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—The second day of the shooting on the Rideau rifle range in the Dominion match opened with the manufacturers' match, open to members of the association. Lieut. Scott, and Private Costigan, and Private Montgomery took $6 each, and Sargison, of British Columbia, $5. The Gowski match opened to one section of five efficient men (non-commissioned officers and rank and file, either or both) from any one regiment, or troop of cavalry, battery or brigade of artillery, etc. The Governor-General's foot guards took first prize, a cup and $50, with 431 points; the 43rd, Ottawa, second, with 430; the Queen's Own, 3rd; Royal Grenadiers, 4th; 13th battalion, 5th; and 6th frontiers, 6th. British Columbia stood thirteenth. Manitoba could not enter the team owing to illness of Macklin, who is better to-day. The weather is excellent for shooting to-day which is open to teams of four efficient men, as in the Gzowski Shield, and $40. 1st, Royal Grenadiers, Toronto; 2nd, 5th Royal Scots; 3rd, 8th Royal rifles; 4th, Queen's Own; British Columbia stood seventeenth and Manitoba nineteenth on the list

AN ENGLISH BEAUTY.

The Duchess of Leinster and Her Diamonds—Her Charities.

The most conspicuous toilet at the last state ball at Buckingham palace was worn by the Duchess of Leinster. It was, says a London letter, her night to wear diamonds, and she fairly glittered in them. She wore diamond epaulets, a diamond corselet, coils of tightly mounted diamonds among the laces of her wondrous gown, a diamond tiara, diamond bracelets, a diamond necklace and more diamond brooches and buckles than the dazzled beholder could count. As Lady Hermione Duncombe, before her marriage with Lord Kildare, who afterwards succeeded to the title of the Duke of Leinster, she was the belle of two London seasons. It will be remembered of her that her facial expression at that period was so haughty and her carriage so proud that the young men of her acquaintance nicknamed her "Lady Admire Me Duncombe." She is a daughter of the Earl of Faversham and is 25 years of age, in the zenith of her beauty. Her charity is untiring. She is a sort of patron saint to hundreds of working girls she has befriended in the most sympathetic, womanly way. At Manooth, Ireland, she has established an industrial school for women and girls where the pupils are taught various industries. The Duchess herself at times teaches a class in the institution, and the verdict is that she ought to cover herself with diamonds if she wants to.

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. INTERVIEWED MARY ANDERSON.

How a Reporter Played the Part of a Bell Boy and Scored a Beat.

Among the well known men about town in Brooklyn is Frank Cooper, who at one time promised to be Bartley Campbell's right bower. Mr. Cooper was formerly a Chicago newspaper reporter, and it was while acting in that capacity that he had a very singular adventure. At the time Mr. Cooper was very young and very ambitious to shine in his profession, and when Mary Anderson, who was then the craze of the theatrical world, reached town, he thought he saw his chance to ascend the first few rungs of the ladder of fame. He would interview the noted actress.

This decision was reached in an instant, but many days passed before the project was put into execution. Miss Anderson's stepfather, Dr. Hamilton Griffin, was keeping his precious charge far from the interviewer in those days. Mr. Cooper finally decided to apply for the honorable position of bell boy in the hotel at which the Anderson party stopped. His youthful appearance helped him and he soon donned the appropriate uniform. Then he lay in wait for a ring from Miss Anderson's room. For over twelve hours he dashed about on errands and carried pitchers of ice water and glasses filled with something stronger before Miss Anderson made up her mind that she wanted anything. Then the little flap covering the number of her room dropped with a click. Cooper had his eye on it, and almost before the clerk could cry "Front!" he was at the desk.

"Number So and So!" said the clerk, "quick."

The messenger needed no urging, but flew up the stairs. His magnet wanted a scuttle of coal and down Cooper rushed. The next minute he was knocking at Miss Anderson's door with one hand and holding the bucket with the other. Once inside he made for the open grate, but in his nervousness he spilled most of the coal on the carpet. Then he sat down in the midst of the ruin he had wrought and looking up found the actress standing over him.

"What do you think of the future of the stage?" burst from his lips.

Miss Anderson was impressed with the humorous side of the situation at once and began laughing. This reassured the disguised reporter, and in a few minutes he was carrying on a discussion with the actress on matters pertaining to her art. This lasted for some time, Miss Anderson expressing great surprise at the knowledge displayed by a bell boy, and Cooper got an interview that all the old hands in town had despaired of being able to procure. How he got out of the room, he says, he never knew, but when he reached the office he threw up his job and rushed for his desk in the city department of a local paper. The next day his interview and a description of the scene appeared. It was the talk of the hour. It was copied far and wide, and the author was assured that his future would be a bright one.

The next day he paid for his temerity. His chief, the late Samuel Medill, a brother of the present owner of the paper in question, was so tickled at the "beat" he had obtained that he insisted that Cooper should meet Dr. Griffin. So that night he took the youthful imposter down to the hotel, and, sending for Dr. Griffin, formally presented him. For a full minute Dr. Griffin looked the reporter straight in the eye, and then, drawing back his hand, struck him in the face. The blow was a hard one, and Cooper reeled and would have fallen to the floor had not Mr. Medill caught him. Before anything could be done Dr. Griffin had turned and left the room, and Mr. Cooper never saw him again.—New York Times.

The Weakness of Tall Men.

Tall men, as a rule, have bodies out of proportion to their lower limbs—that is, smaller than they ought to be—with the natural result that they are unable to bear fatigue, or to compete in the struggles of life with lesser men more harmoniously proportioned. Army experience bears out these observations. In a long and fatiguing march the tall men usually fall out first or succumb to campaigning, unless, as is very rarely the case, they have well knit and symmetrical frames. A soldier between five feet five inches and five feet eight or nine inches is usually the man most capable of bearing the strain of life.—New York Telegram.

Over $300,000 for Postage Stamps.

The most valuable of all private collections belongs to M. Philippe de Ferrari, of the Galliera family, who regularly attends the Paris mart to enrich his album. This family souvenir has already cost more than three hundred thousand dollars, or a million and a half of francs. The acquisition of stamps seems to be the only object for which M. Ferrari considered his mother's millions good enough to be spent, for he has been known to pay from $300 to $500 for a collection from which he wanted only a single stamp.—Paris Letter.

Senator Vance says a constituent of his in a pine woods district of North Carolina, to whom he sent a copy of one of the patent office annual reports, spoke to him of the occurrence in this way: "Gineral, I got them speeches o' yourn, but I couldn't read 'em through. Thar war a leetle too much Whig doctrin' into 'em."

AN OLD LADY TAKING NOTES.

The Streams She Crossed on the Chattanooga to Atlanta.

"Now, Mr. Conductor," said a snappish looking old lady as she boarded the sleeping car at Chattanooga, "I want you to tell me the names of all the places of interest we pass on the way to Atlanta, for this, I believe, is the road along which Sherman marched."

"Yesm'm," replied Mr. J. B. Jackson, the conductor, as he cast his eyes at the pretty girl in the old lady's rear. "Yesm'm, the old lady's rear of the girls, "you get a piece of paper now and take down the names the gentleman tells you."

"Yes, ma," replied the girl with a smile that made the conductor's heart ache

"What stream is that?" asked the old lady, as the train passed over a trestle.

"That's Chickamauga creek," replied the conductor.

"Take that down, Jane."

A half mile further another stream was crossed.

"What stream is that?" again asked the old lady.

"Chickamauga creek," replied the conductor.

"Take that down, Jane."

"What stream is that?" interrogated the old lady.

"Chickamauga."

The old lady began to look suspicious, but said:

"Take that down, Jane."

"What stream is that one yonder, running into those woods; now we are crossing it?"

"Chickamauga."

"Take that down, Jane."

An ominous silence followed until the same creek had been crossed four additional times.

Another stream was seen babbling over the rocky bed.

With a timid glance at the yellow waters the old lady asked:

"And what creek is this?"

"Chickamauga," came the reply in a despairing tone, and the girls looked like they could bite the conductor's head off as the old lady said snappishly:

"Take that down, Jane."

Another creek was crossed, but the old lady said nothing. Still another was crossed, and she asked:

"And that stream is what?"

"Chickamauga."

"Take that down, Jane," was heard in an almost inaudible voice.

Two more streams were crossed, but the old lady was silent.

Suddenly her face brightened with new hope as the train pulled up at a little station.

"What place is this?" she asked, confidently.

"Chickamauga!" came the monotonous reply.

"Jane, throw that paper out of the window. That horrid"——

"Hold on, madam!" exclaimed the conductor; and to save his scalp he had to explain that the state road crossed Chickamauga creek fourteen times before reaching the station by the same name.

It took the old lady some time to recover her spirits, but she did after a while, and the smile and the sweet words she and her daughters gave the conductor on leaving him in Atlanta cheered him for many miles along his way.—Atlanta Journal.

He Wanted to Take Lessons.

A young South Sider approached Ned Williamson, the big Brotherhood shortstop, the other day, called him aside and whispered: My boy, when you begin your out of door practice for the season I should like to have you give me a few lessons in accurate throwing. I have so often seen you nail a grounder and send it shooting into Anson's hands that I know you would be a good tutor. Now, I'll tell you why I want to get points on throwing. I've had sickness in my family lately, and the other night I heard a cat yowling around the front of the house. I went out on the front steps and saw the dark object on the sidewalk. The howling was something frightful. I sneaked in and got a lot of coal and began pegging at the dark object. It didn't move, and the yowling continued.

After I had scattered about half a ton of coal around the neighborhood the cat walked up from the area beneath me, looked up at me and howled worse than ever. I had been throwing coal at a shadow. I got another half ton and threw it at the cat. He looked at me and howled louder. Now, when I can't hit a cat with a ton of large egg I begin to think that the coal dealers are getting even with me, and I want some lessons in throwing. The big shortstop said he would be pleased to give him a few points and show him wherein baseball was an improvement over "one old cat."—Chicago Herald.

Artificial Granite and Marble.

The Paris Revue Industrielle describes some artificial granite and marble exhibited at the Paris exposition by M. Kristoffowitch, who has been experimenting since 1870 on their manufacture. The stone is made of a mixture of refractory clay with ordinary red clay, and is unvitrified, homogeneous and compact, free from air holes or cracks, and can be molded into any form. The resistance to pressure is in direct proportion to the pressure used in molding; an ordinary hand press gives a resistance of 18,500 pounds per square inch, which may be much increased by using hydraulic pressure. The shrinkage can be accurately calculated and exact dimensions secured. The grain depends on the sieves through which the pulverized material is passed. For sculptors' marble, etc., the powder is secured by precipitation in special baths. The color can be varied from light brown to black, or can be specked or mottled by proper mixing so as to imitate marble or porphyry. It is hard enough to scratch glass, it does not disintegrate by the atmospheric action nor wear easily, and it polishes as well as marble or granite. One cubic centimeter weighs about 2.36 grammes, and the crushing strength of a paving block made of it was 260 tons.

A steel company in Illinois, employing 3,000 men, has decided upon the novel plan of placing a premium on the constancy of the employe's service. It offers to men who stay one year one per cent. of their wages in addition, two years two per cent., and so on up to five years, when five per cent. will be added to their pay.

To produce sufficient silk to make a dress requires more time and capital than most people would imagine. If we take one and one-quarter pounds as the weight of pure silk required, this would be equal to two pounds of raw silk. To produce two pounds of raw silk would require the entire silk obtained from 7,000 to 8,000 worms, allowing a percentage for death by disease and other casualties.

A firm in Munich has made a carriage which is propelled by gas generated from benzine or analogous material. The motor, which is not visible from the outside, is placed in the rear of a three-wheeled carriage over the main axle, and the benzine used is carried in a closed copper receptacle secured under the seat, from which it passes drop by drop to the generator. The speed is regulated by a lever. Ten miles an hour can be made.

A recent invention consists of a fender for street railway cars run by electricity. It presents a platform capacious enough to receive a victim so unfortunate as to be caught upon the track before a car. At a slope before it is a heavy four-ply rubber belting, pliable enough to pass over paving-stones and similar objects, but sufficiently rigid to prevent an arm or leg from being drawn under the fender.

The Manufacturers' Record publishes details of companies organized in London, Eng., that will expend $8,000,000 at Middleborough and Cumberland Gap, in addition to what has heretofore been invested. Besides, three other companies have been formed, with an aggregate capital of $8,750,000, to develop 430,000 acres of coal and iron lands in Kentucky and Tennessee. The London Watts Steel and Iron Syndicate, now erecting furnaces at Middleborough, will increase its capital to $7,500,000 and build up other industries.

A metal has been produced that will melt at a temperature of 150 degrees. It is an alloy composed of lead, tin, bismuth and cadmium, and in weight, hardness and color resembles type metal. It melts so easily that, placed on a comparatively cool part of the stove with a piece of paper under it, it will melt without the paper being scorched. It will not retain heat, but becomes cold the moment it melts. It is used in the manufacture of the little automatic fire-alarms for hotels. They give an electric alarm when the metal melts, owing to the rising of the temperature.

The End of a Fortune.

New York, Sept. 1.—The body of a well dressed man was found floating in the water of the bay just off Governor's Island this morning. A letter found on the body showed it to be that of Burr W. Upham, a young man about 30 years of age, who eighteen months ago inherited a fortune of $20,000. In twelve months he spent every cent of the money and was penniless. For some time he has subsisted mainly on money borrowed from friends, and is believed to have committed suicide in a fit of despondency caused by his beggared condition. Upham's father was a wealthy merchant of Troy. Enos W. Saith, an old friend of his father, a request for $10. Mr. Saith replied, writing as follows: "No money to lend," and signed his name. It was this note which was found on Upham's body, that led to his identification. Upham was married and had two children.

Unbearable Agony.

A MAN CANNOT BE CONDEMNED UNHEARD.

In order that it may be clearly seen that the Legislature blundered when it gave the power of suspending or cancelling teachers' certificates into the hands of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, without any appeal from their decision, also to show what the learned judges of the courts of England think about the course pursued by JOHN ROBSON & Co., in depriving a teacher of the opportunity of earning a living without hearing him, or giving him the opportunity of being heard, we quote the following authorities, which condemn such conduct in terms that ought to be unanswerable. Moreover, we would fain hope that our morning contemporary, remembering, that the administration of justice rests with the Government, and that the Premier has with a flourish of trumpets confessed responsibility, will for once stand up for what is right and insist upon the Government acknowledging its error, reversing its decision, and doing all that lies in its power to make reparation for the injury already done:

Lord Campbell, Chief Justice of England, in the King vs. the Archbishop of Canterbury, says in 1. E. and E., page 558, "It is one of the first principles of justice that no man should be condemned without being heard. We do not say whether the Archbishop's decision was right or wrong. We say only that he has not heard the petitioner."

Judge Wightman in the same case says, page 560: "It is not our duty to give an opinion upon the merits of this petition; we merely say that, ex debito justitiæ, every one has a right to be heard before he is condemned."

Judge Hill in the same case, says: "What does the law require in such a case? Invariably that the parties who are liable to the judgment shall be heard. This is a principle which has been laid down in numerous decisions in all the courts."

Lord Kenyon, C.J., in the King vs. Cambridge, 6 T.R., page 107, states: "In Dr. Bentley's case this court interfered, because the principles of all law had been violated; he had been condemned without being heard."

Judge Ashurst in the King vs. Bishop of Ely, states, in 2 T.R., page 336: "The exercise of a visitor's power in a case like the present is a judicial act; and a judge cannot determine without hearing the parties concerned. So that even if he had the right to exercise such a power, he should have done it in a formal manner, and should at least have convened the parties interested to give them an opportunity of making a defence."

Pratt, C.J., in Reg. vs. Cambridge (Dr. Bentley's case), 8 Modern Reports, page 162, states: "It is agreeable to law that a man shall not be deprived of his property without being heard, unless it be by his own default, but it is hard that it should be in the power of one man to suspend or degrade another without any appeal; for if he should err, as all men are subject to error, then the person suspended or degraded has no remedy."

Fortescue, Justice, in Dr. Bentley's case, page 162, states: "Neither does it appear that Dr. Bentley was ever summoned to answer this contempt; and it is against natural justice to deprive a man of his right before he is heard; therefore if there was a custom so to do, such custom would be absolutely void; and it is a thing of daily experience to grant prohibitions to spiritual courts, if they deny the defendants a copy of the libel; because such denial is against natural justice. And now to offer a common instance, viz: Suppose an officer of this court should show any contempt thereof, could he be deprived of his office for such contempt? Certainly he could not. It can never be said that a court which proceeds according to the common law, shall suspend or degrade a person without being heard or summonsed. It must be granted that convictions, even upon acts of parliament, are frequently quashed for not summonsing the persons convicted though not required by the Statute, because it is still against natural justice to convict without hearing. If a justice of a peace convict any man without a summons such conviction is void. I heard a learned civilian say that God himself would not condemn Adam for his transgression until he had called him to know what he could say in his defence. Gen. iii. 9. Such proceeding is agreeable to justice."

BOOMS AND DEPRESSIONS.

A San Francisco paper gives some particulars of the rise and fall of the state of Iowa, which are intended, we suppose, as a warning to the people of several Pacific coast states. There is a lesson in the facts published which ought to be read with profit by our own people, who have not as yet been seized with the "boom" fever, which appears to have taken possession at one time in their history, and with more or less severity, of all the older settled communities of the east. The census has been revealing strange things in different places, and perhaps the strangest of all, in what may still be described as "a new State," is the retrogression shown in the progress and population of the State of Iowa. In 1880, Iowa had a population of 1,624,000, and in 1885, 1,753,000. According to the census just completed, the population has decreased to 1,450,000, a loss of 300,000 in five years.

Iowa has been for forty-five years in the Union. The population was counted in the census of 1840, when as a territory it was found to have 43,000 people. Its soil was chiefly alluvial, a rolling prairie, which yielded easily thirty bushels of wheat or fifty bushels of corn to the acre. In the decade 1840-50 the population increased nearly five-fold, to 193,000, and the same rate of progress was maintained in the succeeding decade. When the great tide of immigration set in during the war Iowa got more than its share; 1870 found it with over 1,000,000 people, and 1880 with 1,624,000. By that time most of the farms on bottom land, with easy access by rail or water to distributing markets, had been occupied, and the laws had put a stop to railroad extension, so that wheat and corn raising in fully half the counties of the State was a futile pursuit. The progress of Iowa was then seen to have culminated.

Owing to the astonishing increase in wheat acreage all over the world, the price of cereals declined to the cost of production or even less. Farms which, in 1877-80, were easily worth $75 an acre could not be sold in 1883 for $25.

Stagnation spread over the State, and not only were new-comers from New England discouraged from settling within its borders, but young men, sons of the soil, departed in search of more promising lands of promise in Dakota, Wyoming, Washington and other States and Territories.

Within the past six or eight years the Iowans have realized that they must adopt new methods if they want to make a living out of the land. Their wheat yield has declined from an average of thirty bushels an acre to an average below twenty. For this there is no remedy, except the use of fertilizers and more thorough cultivation. But the corn crop may be turned to profitable account by increasing the product of pork and beef, and to that the more intelligent farmers of the State are devoting much attention. A corn crop which will not realize over 25 cents a bushel on the farm—that is to say, less than the fixed charges of the grower—may pay a fair profit if it be shipped in the shape of three or four year old steers. But it is evident that the "boom" in Iowa is over. Henceforth the growth may be steady, but it will be slow.

POWDERLY VS. WEBB.

Immediately following the New York Central strike we remarked, in an article on the subject that it seemed the portent of a far reaching and a possibly epoch-making movement. Our reason for so thinking was, that the principle of the recognition of organized labor by capital was at stake. Subsequent events seem to have corroborated our forecast. The end of the strike is not yet, and indeed it seems to be the determination of the Knights of Labor to stop short of nothing save actual violence to carry their point. That which gives significance to the strike is the attitude of POWDERLY. A Conservative man, as even the Plutocrats must confess, he has taken up the grievance of the New York Central strikers, and in so far as he has engaged in wordy warfare with WEBB, he unquestionably has got the best of it. Since the Burlington strike there has been a specific movement on foot with railway companies to get rid of organized labor. The Burlington strike, a long and bitter one, in which the company gained only a nominal victory, convinced railway managers that if they would dominate labor combines must be smashed. The action of WEBB, of the New York Central, was the fruition of this movement. The pear was ripe, he thought; the time had come to purge his country of that dangerous element, the Knights of Labor. Mr. WEBB, however, now that he has precipitated a crisis, lacks the nerve to meet it squarely. He denies what is palpably true, and he confirms the suspicion of his insincerity by refusing to submit the question at issue to arbitration. POWDERLEY's last letter is a bitter pill. He charges WEBB with permitting foreman BRIGGS to assess men under his charge several dollars a month each that they might hold their jobs, and he also makes it appear that with reference to the sin of intemperance, the said BRIGGS took an active part so long as it did not cost him a cent. "Were you a student of economic questions," says POWDERLY, "you would know what the sweating systems means. You would know that it was classed among the worst features of the competitive systems. Under your own nose, beneath your own eye, and carried on by the very men upon whose bare words you dismiss old employees, exists a form of sweating system which finds a parallel origin that is practiced upon the sewing girls of London."

Referring to DEPEW's position in the matter of arbitration, POWDERLY also says:

"In the face of the plain, statesmanlike words of your superior in office, Chauncey M. Depew, you deny the right of arbitration. Let me remind you, sir, that he does not or did not sustain you in the position you have assumed. Depew's words, spoken when the question of a national arbitration law was before the country, indicate where Depew stood that day.

Men whose words I have never had reason to doubt make the statement to me that they were called up by their foreman or superintendent and asked if they were Knights of Labor, and, when they bravely admitted that they were, were discharged. It is not arbitration alone that you refused; you have refused to investigate; to face those men in my presence and satisfy yourself whether your men told you the truth; you have defied the laws of the state in ignoring the board of mediation and arbitration; you have refused to listen to the voice of the public, which asked for simple justice and cares nothing for personality of either of the parties to the controversy."

There is, of course, another side to the matter. Mr. POWDERLY assured that it was not the policy of the company to dismiss Knights of Labor as such, his business with Mr. WEBB was finished. But, in the failure of Mr. WEBB's refusal to assign a reason for the discharge of the men, what were his assurances that he had no animus against the Knights of Labor, good for? If there were good and sufficient reasons for the discharge of the men, why should not Mr. WEBB specify them? This of itself is sufficient to reveal Mr. WEBB's animus, and the fact of his alleging that there is nothing to arbitrate, confirms it.

As to the Knights of Labor, we quote the Oregonian, a paper chary of its support of guilds, labor unions and all that sort of thing. Premising as unalterably right that corporations may manage their business their own way, the Oregonian says:

"On the other hand the faithful, competent workingman has some rights besides those involved in putting in a certain number of hours every day for a stipulated sum, subject in the meantime, to the whims of his superiors and the subtle influences of favoritism. He naturally and properly considers that one of these rights is to know why he is discharged from service, to which he is bending his best energies, and which he knows he is performing faithfully and intelligently. A peremptory discharge followed by a refusal to state a cause would be a serious matter enough if it only involved the loss of a situation that meant bread and shelter for the workingman and his family, and when, in addition to the actual hardships that such discharge often entails, is added the smart of its injustice and the sting of a peremptory dismissal it is little wonder that the laboring man is ready to strike back through the force which the organization of labor furnishes."

A SILLY CUSTOM.

The highest price ever paid for a piece of property in America, perhaps it would not be too much to say the highest rate and the smallest piece of real estate ever purchased anywhere in the world, was realised at the sale of property for taxes at the City Hall in this city yesterday (Monday). City Treasurer KENT, among other lots offered, put up lot 602-3 Government street, the owner of which is unknown, and upon a portion of which taxes to the amount of $37.12 were due. We say "a portion" of the lot only was liable for the unpaid taxes, for at the last tax sale the same lot was put up and a portion, about nine feet front was then sold to Mr. CHARLES HAYWARD for the amount of taxes then due. Lots sold for taxes are not sold outright, or rather the entire tract or lot is not sold. Bids are made for quantities, for which the bidders will pay the taxes due. Thus, one man offered to take ten feet of the lot and pay the $37.12; another said he would take five feet and pay the taxes, another two feet and so on. This is the system of auctioneering, and in this way the curious farce was enacted of a purchaser becoming an owner of a piece of ground one one-hundred and thirty-second part of an inch in width by 120 feet long for the sum of $37.12. The width is about the same as the thickness of this sheet of paper. It will probably be surveyed alongside of the land some years ago purchased by Mr. HAYWARD, and if a foothold can be got for fence pickets it may be fenced in. At $37.12 for 1-132nd part of an inch, the price paid per inch was $4,899.84 per foot, $58,798.08, and for a lot of sixty feet frontage, which is the width of all our city lots, $3,527,884.80. These figures will no doubt set the average Vancouver real estate agent "green with envy," especially when all the circumstances of the sale are taken into account and the indefinable demensions of the property are considered. But are not such sales farcial in the extreme. The same object would be gained by selling the entire lot to the highest bidder, the proceeds to go into the city treasury, and the city lots would not then be parcelled out like the French farms along the St. Lawrence. There is work for the reformer among the municipal laws of the Province.

THE LAW OF LIBEL IN JAPAN.

It is pleasing to find on the principle of course that "misery likes company"—that the law of libel is even more severe in Japan than in British Columbia. Several writers there have just got four years' penal servitude for speaking disrespectfully of somebody who lived some centuries before CHRIST. An English exchange says:—

"It is rather difficult to discuss such a novelty as a Japanese Parliamentary election with perfect gravity. GILBERT and SULLIVAN have done something to place the Japanese as a nation in a grotesque light, and some of the incidents reported with reference to the recent electoral contests are not altogether inconsistent with the less serious view of public life in the Far East. It is a hopeful sign of the times, however, that the editor of the principle native newspaper has beenelected member for Yokohama. Journalists evidently need friends in the Council of the nation, for only recently four newspaper writers were condemned to four years' imprisonment with hard labor for writing disrespectfully of a potentate who flourished before the Christian era. Reverence is a virtue which most of us think is not unduly common in the Western world, and it might with advantage be more generally cultivated here; but respect for antiquity and constituted authority would certainly be deemed excessive if it rendered adverse criticism, say, of King LEAR a penal offence. Perhaps, however, the spread of political freedom will speedily effect a change in this respect in Japan."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There are seventy-two men in the United States whose combined wealth would pay the National debt. Only six of these inherited wealth, the other sixty-six commenced life in poverty or with but limited means; which shows that getting rich in this country is not a question of class, but of "cuteness" in some cases, and of "cussedness" in others; both of which are liable to be possessed "irrespective of race, color or previous condition."

While marine architect are cudgelling their brains to build a vessel that shall be impenetrable to shot, and gunburiders and scientists are laboring to invent guns and explosives that shall be irresistible, a Vienna physician has invented a fluid, the use of which, he claims, will minimize the horrors of war, making it almost bloodless. The fluid is to be placed in a shell, projected in the ordinary manner, which is so constructed that it will burst in falling or striking any object offering but slight resistance. The fluid, upon being released, so affects persons inhaling its odor that they immediately become unconscious, and remain in that state half an hour or more. This must be the stuff that HEINRICH HUDSON's men made RIPVAN WINKLE drink.

A form of inebriety due to excessive use of coffee is said by a scientist to be on the increase in Germany. Its worst form is found among the women of the upper working classes, some of whom consume over a pound of coffee a week. A similar danger is said to lurk in the excessive use of tea. Many persons are so given over to the tea habit that the want of tea at any meal in the day will produce a violent headache. This is analogous to the terrible depression which overtakes the alcohol drunkard when his supplies are suddenly cut off. The excessive use of tea and coffee is often due to insufficient nutrition—people seeking in these beverages the stimulation which should come from good food.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

TO THE EDITOR:—In the course of conversation with a commercial traveler I learned that the tax imposed upon them by the city was a dead letter, and that the city treasury was some $5000 poorer by the negligence of some one. He stated that at least one hundred travelers had solicited business in Victoria without paying this tax. Should we not either attend to business or play the farce out? OBSERVER.

MR. FAIRALL'S COMPLAINTS.

TO THE EDITOR:—Is there justice in British Columbia? I was struck at on my own premises by an individual by the name of Wilfred Nicholls; falling down, he kicked me in the neck and struck me in the head (while down). After getting off me he then drew a revolver and covered me with it till I got into my house, when it was taken from him by the Hon. D. Higgins, who again handed it back to him.

I sent to the provincial constable twice before he would come, and when he did come two hours after (in my absence going in for him myself), he refused to take any action against Nicholls when requested to do so by my son, for carrying concealed weapons. I have been given to understand he would have lost two situations if he had done so.

I applied to Mr. Shotbolt personally for summonses, which he refused to grant, but referred me to the Hon. Theodore Davie.

Not knowing what to do and thinking perhaps justice might be obtained at Esquimalt, I appealed to Magistrate Fisher for summonses, which were issued. On the day of trial Mr. Higgins was there with a solicitor for Nicholls, but no witnesses. I applied for an adjournment till Saturday, being one clear day (as my solicitor did not appear through mistaking the instruction of my son) being too ill myself to go into town. This the defendant's solicitor objected to, it would not defeat the ends of justice, so it was adjourned two weeks, illegally, at their request. I again objected, suspecting what was meant. I then spent two days trying to find Mr. Johnson, stipendiary magistrate, but could not catch him, calling at the provincial police court twenty times and at his house, to get fresh summonses, but did not succeed.

Then came on the day of trial at Esquimalt, when Mr. Higgins, with solicitor and Nicholls, with no witnesses again, put in an appearance, showing that they were aware of the illegal adjournment and that they could defeat the ends of justice with impunity. Mr. Fisher and Mr. Bullen, acting as magistrates (and what a farce of justice). Mr. Fisher acted as master of ceremonies by asking first if the $10 he had ordered to be paid into court (another illegal action) had been paid the constable. Acting under advice I had not paid. He stated he would not go on with the case; another illegal action, as his refusal was non-payment of the ten dollars. My solicitor replied he could not, as the law did not allow. Of course Mr. Fisher pretended ignorance. Mr. Bullen then handed some obsolete statute to his confrere which created a laugh in court, showing his ignorance. Mr. Fisher then addressed the court after the manner of an old man in his dotage.

It has been stated that I threatened Mr. Higgins and Nicholls. This I deny and defy them to prove.

I was born under the British flag, and have always lived under it, and expected to get British fair play, not Yankee brute force; and did not believe that such a thing that has happened to me could occur in a British colony with impunity and no redress. If this hireling of Mr. Higgins can do this to me, he can do it to any man in British Columbia. Mr. Higgins was allowed to insult me in court the first day, but I was not permitted to speak. I should think the time had come when Esquimalt district ought to be presided over by magistrates without partiality and who are fearless of friend or foe and to whom the public look with respect, and not derision. In conclusion, many people in Victoria West expressed themselves to me that I would not get justice at Esquimalt, and that the usefulness of Judge Fisher had gone past years ago, and it was about time he had retired from the bench or was made to retire.

Trusting you will publish this in your next issue, I am, dear sir, yours truly,

H. S. FAIRALL.

One who has been an assistant town clerk for many years.

A BUSY MAN.

The Prince of Wales and His Multitudenous Duties.

As is well known, England is the home of constitutional fictions and we may include in the interesting catalogue the notion that the Prince of Wales has nothing to do. The constitution assigns him no public work, the Government of the day dare not give it to him, and there are persons of sane mind who, firmly believing in the constitution and the Government, and shutting their eyes to facts, imagine that his life must be uneventful, languid and purely private.

It is nothing of the kind. It was never intended to be anything of the kind. Even if the constitution had forgotten the Heir Apparent, the pressure of circumstances, the force of his own individuality, and the splendid example set him by his august father, would, as we know they have done, have given him a public life certain to command attention and respect.

The more extensive our information becomes, the higher is the estimate we must form of the public work of the Prince of Wales, and of the equipment that has been made for it. He is an accomplished linguist. He has stored his mind with the most varied information. Few men have a more extensive acquaintance with the various countries of the world and their public characters. As a young man, he wrote home letters to the Queen describing his travels.

The Prince's public work commenced with visit to Canada in 1859, when he was within a few months of his eighteenth year. He opened exhibitions, bridges and parks, laid foundation-stones and received and replied to addresses by the score. His public work has never been interrupted since that date, except by his illness in 1871.

In the matter of tours, blending public, social and private functions, the Prince has done, and continues to do, an amount of work that has never been equalled, much less excelled. No living man has received more public addresses, and conversed with more of the public men of all countries, or had better opportunities of acquiring the most cosmopolitan information.

The Prince of Wales' collected addresses run from 1863 to 1883, and are 154 in number. Eleven have been delivered at Royal Academy banquets, six at Trinity House, and four in connection with the Royal College of Music. The more numerous addresses touch such diversified subjects as commerce, agriculture, education, public works, medical charity and general philanthropy. They are short, kindly and appreciative, obviously bearing about them the stamp of the Prince of Wales' individuality.

There is only one principle at the basis of the public work of the Prince of Wales undertakes to perform. If it be likely to promote the national good he is heart and soul in its favor.

How many social movements has His Royal Highness not headed? New departures find him a friend and kindly adviser. He is ever on the watch to do good by publicly helping charities, and philanthropic objects. His daily struggles at Sandringham, not less than in his workroom at Marlborough House, involve much dry reading of this kind—reports, public and private appeals and the like.

The "Bitter Cry of Outcast London" awoke a response in his heart. The alarm about leprosy found him equal to the occasion. Discrimination involves inquiry, and the balancing of evidence and probability. The Prince of Wales is constantly compelled to make exhaustive inquiries into the institutions he is asked to publicly assist, and it is high testimony to his carefulness and skill in such matters that he has seldom given his support to movements of an unsatisfactory nature. Considering how often he is invited to lend his aid to societies by public appearances, it is remarkable that he has found time for preliminary inquiries, involving the most delicate handling of facts, and negotiations with persons, in the midst of his many social and purely ceremonial duties. Indeed, he is now quite an expert in dealing with non-political public movements. He displays great tact and shrewdness in making and fulfilling these engagements. He is always genial and yet never fulsome.

In the work of commission or committee keen observers have been much pleased with his businesslike adroitness and alertness. He never makes a mistake, and if others unfortunately do so he assists them with a ready aptitude so clever in its effect that three-fourths of the persons present never notice the contretemps. We have heard of many such instances as well as having witnessed several.

The Prince has to keep abreast of the times, and his duty involves much reading, a good deal of writing, and discussion with competent informants. His public work occupies a portion of every day, and his business habits teach him dispatch, method and precision. He does not know what actual idleness means, and he is so well versed in public as distinct from party-political movements, that in a rigorous competitive examination he would not easily be beaten. Indeed, he could give points to some of the satirists who ignorantly regard him as a lazy personage.

He enjoys public work and no one can say of him that he looks bored or distrait. He is often fatigued with a round of work and social observances; for he manfully executes all his duties, with a kindliness and punctilio seldom seen in such felicitous combination.

There is no busier man in Europe. A Minister of State has fewer social duties. A popular peer has not so many difficult public functions to perform. No philanthropist can excel him in delicately discriminating benevolence, says a writer in Cassel's Magazine. No prince of England ever led so many new departures, or mixed so freely with public men in promoting purely national movements, social, educational and charitable, or was ever so highly esteemed by the personages in immediate contact with him.

As the London Times once truly said, the representative duties of royalty are heavier worked than the private functions which the hardest worked Englishmen has to perform. Circumstances have imposed on the Prince of Wales a very large share of these duties, and he has borne his part bravely, and with an alacrity and kindliness, a tact and cleverness, which cannot be praised too highly. He is a born leader and a born worker.—English Paper.

FADS AND FASHIONS.

BLACK ice cream is a new fad. It is colored by the addition of charcoal and the juice of Turkish prunes.

WHITE lilac, white violet, white hyacinth, and orris are some of the delicious scents that ultra fashionable coiffeurs sprinkle in the hair after it is dressed.

THE latest idea in elaborate dressing is to have a design wrought in jewelson the instep of evening silk stockings. A millionaire lady has set this pretty and expensive fashion.

TIME was when fashion for beauty wore her court plaster cut heart shape and glued to her cheek or temple. Now La Mode scissors a circular disk, which is placed between her lower lip and chin as near the center as it is possible to locate it.

THE latest fad in the science of beauty is not to eat. The professional reconstructor of feminine charms prescribes strictly a fast for the first three days of each month, and very light food for general living. A liquid medicine is prepared which takes off the edge of hunger.

THE old-fashioned knocker is being restored to its former prestige in New York City. Ultra-fashionables are having them placed upon their big front doors. Happy the people who possess an heirloom in the shape of an old colonial knocker—a lion's head with a ring in its mouth or a pair of clasped hands. Such a knocker will be a social certificate akin to that of old China and mahogany sideboards.

JUST now the tombola is the rage. A woman who pets a church or a charity sends out cards to her friends with a price of admission marked in the P. P. C. corner, which entitles the holder to enter her parlor or dining-room and make off with any one of the parcels set forth. At five dollars tombola's bits of faience, small pieces of plate, books and the like are exhibited. Fancy work, dishrags, bath-mittens; fruits—such as pineapple, preserves and okra, with loaf cake and choice bonbons, comprise the stock. The entertainment is nothing more or less than a high grade of grab-bag.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

PRINCE DHULEEP SINGH.

The Dethroned Prince Repeats of his Ill-Humor and Returns to England.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The Queen as reported has pardoned the Hindoo Prince Dhuleep Singh, who has apologized for his hostility to England. The pardon was conditioned on his renouncing his claim to the Province of Lahore.

The Princess of the Punjaub refused to concur unless they should receive compensation in the shape of subsidy for the loss of their prospective interest in Dhuleep Singh's dominions.

This matter was finally arranged satisfactorily. It is expected that part of his sovereign rights will be returned to him by England as a reward for his renewed adhesion. He will, however, reside permanently in Europe.

HE OWNED THE KOH-I-NOOR.

Dhuleep Singh, when a little boy, was the Maharajah of Lahore, and the owner of Koh-i-noor, or Mountain of Light, now the chief among the crown jewels of England. Dhuleep was not yet in his teens when the great Sikh dynasty, of which he was the last representative, fell before the arms of England, and the little boy lost his throne and his wonderful diamond. The third clause of the treaty of peace provided that "the gem called the Koh-i-noor shall be surrendered by the Maharajah of Lahore to the Queen of England."

It is doubtful if the English ever spent so much money on any other fallen foe as on the ex-Maharajah of Lahore. He was taken to England along with the Koh-i-noor and no English Prince was ever more carefully reared and educated. As he grew to manhood parliament voted him money to buy a magnificent estate and $125,000 a year to keep the wolf from the door.

HE BECAME EXTREMELY LAVISH

in his expenditure, supported a first-class shooting box and stable, on grand occasions outshone everybody in the splendor of his diamonds, and in fact became one of the most stunning young men in England. He was now and then a guest at the palace and was a favorite in aristocratic society.

"I should like," he said one day, "to place the Koh-i-noor in the Queen's hand now that I am a man. I was only a child when I surrendered it to her by the treaty, but now I am old enough to understand."

The very next day he was summoned to the palace. The jewel was placed in his hand and for some time he toyed with it. Then the descendant of Eastern kings handed back the rich prize of many conquests and formally remarked that it gave him much pleasure to place the jewel in the hand of his sovereign.

But not a great while after Dhuleep Singh ceased to hold the Queen in such high regard. He begged to inquire how many millions she was making out of his old country, the Punjaub, while he was almost starving on the BEGGARLY PITTANCE OF $125,000 A YEAR.

In fact $125,000 was a small sum of money when compared with the almost fabulous income of his predecessors on the throne of Lahore. He appealed to the Government to give him a larger allowance, but the request was refused. So Dhuleep Singh said if he couldn't have money enough to properly support his dignity he would not take a penny. He therefore betook himself and his gorgeous diamonds to foreign parts. His gems, like the Koh-i-noor, were derived from his fathers, and were worth a goodly fortune.

His departure moved the British to contemplation. They really did not know how much mischief the ex-Maharajah might stir up among the disaffected elements in India. He had hardly crossed over to France before the British offered him all he had asked to come back. But he would not stir a peg. He was a Sikh chief again, robbed of his rights, his people and his splendor, by a brutal invader. From that position he has never swerved till now. Nearly every court on the continent has harbored him, and he has ever been ready to tell the story of his wrongs to all who would listen. For years he has periodically issued addresses to the Sikh people, and promising to appear among them soon to restore the old regime. In the proclamation issued two years ago to the princes and people of India he signed himself:

URGING THEM TO REVOLT,

"Sovereign of the Sikh nations and implacable foe of the British Government."

Some of his friends in India have always managed to have his proclamations mysteriously placarded on the billboards. Of late years, however, these effusions have been hardly more than objects of derision.

Last year he wrote a letter to Queen Victoria telling her it was high time she restored the Koh-i-noor to its rightful owner.

Of late years Dhuleep Singh has lived mostly in Russia. He attended the Paris exposition last year, and an English paper said he was looking rather seedy and "out of luck."

As far as is known, he has no means of support for many years except the gems he has occasionally sold. He is now getting old, and it is certain that his old spirit is broken, or he would never renounce a jot or tittle of his regal claims upon the Punjaub for all the wealth and honor England could give him. For many years he had but to speak the word and a princely income would have flowed to him from British coffers. But he never spoke the word.

Dhuleep Singh has a son who is an officer in the British army, has been stationed in Canada and is known in New York society.

Australian Labor Troubles.

MELBOURNE, Aug 31.—The full police force and 1000 special constables were on duty to-day, but the labor demonstrations proved orderly. Forty thousand men, representing all trades, paraded the streets. A meeting was held subsequently.

SYDNEY, Aug. 31.—The colonial government has decided to partially barricade the circular quay here for protection against blacklegs while the strike in the shipping trade is on.

Stick to the Right.

Right actions spring from right principles. In cases of diarrhœa, dysentery, cramps, colic, summer complaint, cholera morbus, etc., the right remedy is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry—an unfailing cure—made on the principle that nature's remedies are best. Never travel without it.

The Library.

Notice has been given to the lessor of the present city library rooms in Spencer's Arcade building that after the end of September the rooms will not be longer needed. The new and much more commodious quarters in the city hall will be ready by that time.

Caretaker's in Numbers.

Over twenty applications for the position of caretaker for the City Hall have been put in, in answer to an advertisement in reference to the situation. Whoever gets the job will earn his money if he keeps the rooms neat and tidy and looks after the fires, etc.

A Month's Record.

During the month past there have been ten fires reported to the Chief Engineer. Of these three were "still alarms." One was outside the city limits, the fire on the Badger, the loss of which can not with fairness be charged to the record. The damage to city property was only $75, the fire in Gray's saw mill having been that amount.

The Public Library.

City Librarian McGregor has kindly furnished the figures denoting the business done in the library for the month of August. A synopsis of them shows as follows: Number of books lent, 2373, Ladies took out 1154. An average of 104 daily. New cards were to the number of 54, ladies taking 14, and gentlemen 40. The business of the institution is increasing rapidly, as can be seen by the result of last month, when 2021 volumns were loaned with an average of 92 per day.

Presbytery of Columbia.

The autumn meeting of the Presbytery of Columbia will be held in St. Andrew's Church, New Westminster, on Tuesday the 9th inst. A full attendance of members from all parts of the Province is expected. The Rev. Dr. Robertson, of Winnipeg, Superintendent of Presbyterian Missions, who is at present making his first official visit to all the congregations and mission stations in British Columbia will also be present to aid the Presbytery in maturing plans for the maintainance of ordinances and the further extension of the church's work throughout the Province.

From Wellington.

The soldiers are being gradually drawn away from the front one by one according to order, and it is presumed this course of withdrawing them has been adopted in order to cause as little notice of their withdrawal as possible. Capt. Ogilvie passed down this morning in private clothes accompanied by a color-sergeant, so that now there only remains a company of eight in charge of a sergeant.

The usual procession took place yesterday and although it was rather wet, still the same enthusiasm was displayed.

It is reported the company expect about fifty men to arrive there during the week to take the place of a few of the locked out miners, but these rumors have been repeatedly circulated and therefore very little credence is placed in the report.

THE UNDERGROUND FIRE.

No. 3 Pit of the Wellington Mines Doomed to Destruction.

It is now stated, says the Free Press, that the fire which started in the "gob" at the No. 3 pit, Wellington collieries, has made serious headway during the past few days and is among the pillars and timbers. A gang of men are kept working at it day and night, but all efforts to extinguish it have been abandoned. The management of the mine, has decided that all the avenues to the seat of the fire shall be closed up and an effort made to smother the flames.

The No. 3 pit, is one of the earliest pits in South Wellington and the workings extend over a very large area. The mine is practically worked out, only the pillars remaining. It is connected with the No. 4 pit, but works with a separate and distinct air shaft.

As these workings are old and contain a large quantity of the refuse of the mine, it is feared that the fire will assume alarming proportions.

The breaking down of the ventilating fan is very unfortunate, as it hampers operations.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

STOLE A THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Freight Clerk Who Spent More Than He Earned---Now Arrested.

Behind the bars of the Seattle jail is S. Callin, the dapper young freight clerk of the side-wheel steamboat Idaho. He was arrested on a charge of stealing $1,000 in gold coin from the Northwest Express Company of this city nearly a week ago. The evidence against the prisoner, who is scarcely 21 years of age, is very clear, and his guilt is almost proved.

He is supposed to have stolen the money out of a sack of $5,000 in transit, ripping open the bottom seam, extracting the stuff and then sewing up the seam again, the loss not being noticed until the bag was taken to the bank. After the loss was ascertained, Callin's movements were shadowed, and it soon became apparent that he was making way with more money than he was receiving. The company pays him $35 a month, and he was wont to spend as much nearly every night while in town for wine and women. Little by little the vigilant officers gathered up and followed the web of evidence, and, being sure they were on the right track, the arrest was not made until they were confident they had sufficient evidence to warrant an immediate conviction.

A VERY BAD MAN

It was learned at Seattle yesterday that S. D. Hendricks, the Portland agent of the New York oil manufacturing firm of Leonard & Ellis, well known on the coast as a travelling man, committed the crime of bigamy in Seattle on the night of August 8, after deserting his wife, who is now in Portland, and who yesterday for the first time learned the true facts concerning her husband's disappearance and dishonor.

He got married at the Russ House, Seattle, to a notorious prostitute named Annie Smith, he having been assisted in getting a license to wed and a parson, by the clerk of the Russ House, who must have known that Hendricks was already married, and it is strange that he could find any any one to assist him in carrying out his strange criminal freak. The woman he mrrried was evidently of the very worst type, and those who know him say they cannot account for his action. His wife in Portland is a handsome and refined woman, and as far as can be learned, they lived together happily.

Hendricks' friends are at an utter loss to account for his action. They claim that he must have been insane, or else suddenly and madly infatuated with the woman. He and his second wife were seen together in Victoria a few days ago. The deserted wife is heart broken over the affair.

SOMETHING NEEDED.

Either Sign Posts Should be Erected, or Guides Employed.

The difficulties that meet a stranger who ventures within the gloomy portals of the new Law Courts, on Bastion Square, are almost equal to those which beset the traveler who penetrates the jungles of Darkest Africa. While the dangers from wild beasts may not be quite so pronounced in the Law Courts, there is great likelihood of the uneducated being lost in the mazy labyrinths of that fearfully and wonderfully made pile of brick and stone, which has been rearhed evidently with the intention of befogging the intellects of those who try to thread its labyrinthine passages. Only the other day, a gentleman whose skill in woodcraft is well known, and who has traveled through the dense forests of this province guided only by an intuitive feeling that he was on the right course, entered the Law Courts with the intention of finding the office of one of the attaches of the great legal machine which slowly revolves therein. Full of his business he entered, and walked up the first flight of steps. He looked around for the place he sought. It could not be seen. Numberless passages and doors confronted him. He took one by chance, and a turn disclosed a pair of stairs. Up these he mounted. At the top more branching passages added to his bewilderment. Several of them he explored. The light was dim, and ghostly. A name less fear took possession of the seeker. He was lost. But lo! he sees a passage, and it looks lighter than the other. He goes down it, his spirits rising with delight at the thought that he would once more see the outer world. Quicker he steps. A corner is turned and he walks up against a blank wall. The passage led to nowhere. Again he tried to find his way, and was almost giving up, when he met one who knew the inner secrets of the wonderful structure, and the wanderer was guided to the place he had so eagerly sought.

In view of this it is suggested that the proper authorities do something to help out those who may have business to visit the edifice devoted to law. Guides should either be procured, or else finger posts and sign boards should be erected. The latter course might perhaps do, but the engagement of guides would be a good idea, as it would furnish positions for a lot of Government hangers-on.

The Queen Pays All Expenses.

The Queen's last "Free Trip to Europe" having excited such universal interest, the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 extra for expenses, to the person sending the largest list of English words constructed from letters contained in the words "British North America." Additional prizes, consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Gold Watches, French Music Boxes, Portiere Curtains, Silk Dresses, Mantel Clocks, and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin Jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to the girl or boy (delivered free in Canada or United States), sending largest lists. Everyone sending a list of not less than twenty words will receive a present. Send four 3c. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample number of The Queen.

A Days Grace.

The September session of the County Court commences on Thursday, Sept. 4th, not Wednesday as has been published. The court always commences on the first Thursday of each month.

For Honolulu.

Admiral Brown received an order on Sunday from the Secretary of the Navy to "proceed to Honolulu with dispatch," and the Charleston left on Monday forenoon. The voyage, it is expected, will be made in a week.

An Improvement.

W. M. Halliday is now busy compiling for R. T. Williams, publisher of the B. C. Directory, the largest and most complete directory of the Province ever published.

Reserve your orders for it. 26-1w.

What to Wear.

To-day there arrived the first consignment of fall goods for gentleman's clothing. They comprise a well selected stock of Scotch, French, and German goods in the latest patterns, and will be made up at reasonable figures, in a first class manner, by J. Mc. Callum, 43 Fort street.

Bound to Get There.

Half-a-dozen sailors, who evidently had stood around the streets too long to allow themselves time to get aboard without breaking their leave, borrowed a hand car from the E. & N. railway this morning. When last seen they were flying around the curve leading to Russells station on their way to Esquimalt.

Nine Dry Docks.

Admiral Brown, of the U. S. Cruiser Charleston, has been interviewed by a party in search of information re the establishment of a dry dock by the U.S. Government on Puget Sound. The Admiral blandly assured the interviewers that nine dry docks were to be built so that every rising city could have one.

Cannot be Surpassed

Mr. Jno. T. Pierre, merchant tailor, has received his first shipment of fall and winter goods, comprising elegant English and American costings, suitings and trousering. On inspection they will be welcomed by lovers of choice cloth as they far surpass any previous importation of woolens into British Columbia, and as Mr. Pierre employs none but the best workmen, his customers may depend on having their garments cut and made in a satisfactory manner.

The Old Fashioned Style.

On Sunday last the ceremony of "calling the banns" was performed at the Gorge Road Methodist church, a couple taking this method of informing the world that they intend to commit matrimony. In England it is quite customary to do so, in the Established Church, especially among poor people, as the calling of the banns saves the cost of a license, the church there being a State one. As there is no State church in Canada, the incident of last Sunday is probably a clinging to old customs.

Their Occupation Gone.

Assistant United States District-Attorney Sullivan has filed libels at Seattle in cases of forfeiture for violation of the United States statutes, against the sloops Sea Gull and Alert, now held under seizure at Port Townsend by Collector Bradshaw. The Sea Gull, the libel alleges, was sold to Nil Knudson, an alien, last July. The Alert was seized the latter part of July last for smuggling Chinese into this port from Victoria. Her owner is unknown. The hearing of the libels is set for October 2nd.

A Long Intermission.

The first arrests made by the city since Friday were made last evening by Officer Levin, who picked up two drunks, one a soldier and the other an Indian, both of whom were fined five dollars this morning. This is a pretty good sign that Victoria can compare with any city of her size as to the small number of criminals in her boundaries. A really serious offence is something rarely known in this city, and things that are an every day occurrence in towns smaller than Victoria are looked upon here like murders in other places. In fact the time at the police court is principally taken up with summons cases which count for nothing to speak about.

A Millionaire Dead.

A Seattle millionaire, named W. C. Hill, died suddenly on Saturday night, of heart desease or apoplexy. Mr. Hill had made a fortune in Washington, speculating in land, before coming west. He was worth from two to three millions. Originally a clerk in the land department he became a land lawyer, and seeing the opportunities for investment began in a small way. He succeeded, and increasing his ventures he soon acquired a fortune. He came to Seattle to look after land interests acquired while in the east and to find a larger field for his speculations. He was highly respected as a citizen, and was only 43 years of age.

Nymph Dramatic Company.

The Amateur Dramatic Company of H. M. S. Nymph, gave an excellent entertainment at the Victoria Theatre last evening for the benefit of the Seaman's and Marine Orphan Homes. The theatre was well filled, and the applause was frequent and prolonged. The Warspite string band was the principal attraction, some fine selections being rendered. One of those, the "Descriptive Nautical Fantasia," portrayed musically the life of a sailor from his commissioning and start from "Old England," till his arrival home after an eventful voyage.

The programme included two farces, "Borrowed Plumes" and "Leave it to me," which were creditably presented. A cornet solo by Mr. F. Donoghue, of the Warspite Band, was well played. Although loudly encored, Mr. Donoghue did not respond. Mr. J. Ferris proved himself a first class dancer, and Mr. Davenport in a topical sang, "That's the Latest," made several hits. Mr. W. Sims' song, "I couldn't," was well sung, and in the farces Mr. Sims made a decided hit by his good makes-up and clever acting.

A good sum was netted for the Homes, and those who attended the entertainment were well amused.

TO DEEPEN THE CHANNEL.

A Memorial Forwarded to Ottawa on Harbor Improvements.

At the regular meeting of the council of the B. C. Board of Trade held this morning, a communication was read from R. P. Rithet stating that in a month he will have a new wharf ready for the long that the new China steamers of the C. P. N. R. Company were running. The communication was accompanied by a plan of the new wharf and its surroundings, on which was shown a large portion of the outer harbor which Mr. Rithet intends to dredge. In consideration of the amount of work that he intends to do, Mr. Rithet asks the board to forward a memorial to the Dominion Government requesting them to dredge the channel leading to the wharf and harbor. He intends to make the channel 30 feet deep at the wharf at low tide and wants the Government to make the channel the same depth. The channel is only twenty feet deep at present and consequently needs deepening by 10 feet, which when done will enable ships and steamers of any size to land with safety at low tide. The board will forward the memorial, and it is to be hoped that the Government will attend to the matter at once, as the interests of our commerce will require that the facilities for docking the new C. P. R. steamers be provided by the time those steamers begin their trips across the Pacific.

PERSONAL.

Movements of Well Known People in Various Directions.

Hon. Z. K. Straight, of Walla Walla, is at the Driard.

Hon. P. O'Reilly, who has been quite ill lately is improving.

Mrs. Bugnes, of this city, goes to Seattle on Saturday, and will permanently reside there.

Geo. Lawless, Esq., staff paymaster of H. M. S. Warspite, and Mrs Lawless are at the Roccabella.

E. B. Marvin left by the Islander this morning on a visit to his home in Halifax, N. S., which he left 33 years ago.

Mrs. D. W. Morrow and Mrs. J. W. Williams will be passengers for California by the City of Puebla on Saturday.

W. A. Russell, superintendent engineer of the C. P. N., has returned from Westminster where he has been looking after the company's steamers which have that port for their headquarters.

NAUTICAL NOTES.

Items of Interest Along the Water Front—General Marine News.

The steamer Wellington came out of dock yesterday.

The C. P. R. company's steamer Danube arrived from Vancouver this morning with 80 tons of Chinese freight for this city.

F. C. Gamble, C.E., left for Baynes Sound by the steamer Sir James Douglas this morning to inspect the lighthouse on Yellow Island.

The steamer Queen arrived at Nanaimo yesterday and after taking on a full cargo of coal left for San Francisco where she will lay up for about a month.

The Pacific Mail Company's steamer Rio de Janeiro which was due from China on Thursday, will not arrive here until the 14th inst., as she was delayed by running into a large steamer between Asiatic ports.

Capt. Jagers of the steamer Rithet, arrived from Westminster this morning reports a great deal of fog in the gulf. The Islander was evidently delayed this morning, for she was met eight miles this side of Plumper's Pass by the Rithet at half past eight o'clock.

The fate of the magnificent steamship Queen, of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, in so far as her presence at this port and engagement on the Alaska route this year is concerned, has been definitely settled. Port Townsend advices have been received by the company's representative, ordering the Queen to Nanaimo, B. C., to load coal and proceed to San Francisco with the least possible delay. Contrary to general expectations, she will not be substituted for the Zealandia on the Australian run, but will take her old Southern California coast route for the winter and spring months. Next year the Queen will again go into the Alaskan excursion business and will undoubtedly in the future rank the popular passenger packet with excursionists to the far north that she has in the past.

Victoria Fair One.

The bright warm sun, with streets free from dust, made this afternoon especially attractive to the ladies, and many of the fair sex could be seen out for a walk. Speaking of the ladies it is not flattering to say that Victoria has more pretty girls to the square foot than any city on the coast. It may be in the climate, or it may be something else, but whatever it is the fact remains that for good looks Victorians of the gentler sex take the prize.

Due This Afternoon.

The Hudson Bay Co's bark Titania, Capt. Dunn, was towed into Dungeness last night by an American tug. A local boat went over to bring her to Esquimalt and will arrive about 5 o'clock. The Titania has been out 125 days from London with a general cargo consigned to the H. B. Co. Although a fairly fast trip for an ordinary ship it is not a very fast one for the Titania as she is considered one of the fastest sailors afloat. After discharging she will load salmon as usual for the old country.

Back From His Holidays.

Sergt. Walker of city police has returned from his annual holidays and is again in active service. He spent his holidays, or part of them, in Seattle, Tacoma, and Portland. While across the Sound he saw several of the crooks and vags which have been cleared out of Victoria by his vigilance. The sergeant says that the growth of the Sound cities, Seattle in particular, is astonishing, but for a quiet and enjoyable life Victoria is the city for excellence.

New Arrivals.

Every day will be found in our city hotel registers the names of the new arrivals; but no mention will be made of the elegant lot of carpets just arrived for Hastie & Erskine. Persons furnishing will do well to see them at 62 Government street, before purchasing elsewhere. Patterns and prices are right.

Coming North.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 2.—The following passengers are on the Umatilla bound for Victoria: C. A. Pullan, G. E. Bertram and wife, Mrs. A. E. Rogers, Mrs. W. F. Turner, Miss. T. M. Everett, E. Kinnano, H. W. Barnam, A. W. Barnam, Mrs. A. Bushby and daughter, G. F. Bushby, M. B. Hill, S. Alsop, wife and child, R. Alsop, S. Alsop.

Improvements.

The old Gospel Hall in Moody's block has been remodelled and turned into offices, which, as the locality, corner of Broad and Yates streets, is a central one, will be readily rented. Halls, such as it was, are not good property for landlords, hence the change. The whole interior of the building is also being renovated and renewed.

Work at Westminster.

The work of putting in water pipes and mains for the city of New Westminster is to be pushed rapidly to completion. Mr. Thomas Gowen, who was resident of Victoria for many years, has been appointed engineer to superintend the work. He will also look after the construction of the new ferry steamer to be built and run between Westminster and Bromshille.

Were They Smuggled?

Late last night a number of Chinamen, with their baggage, were seen meandering towards Chinatown from Cadboro Bay road. It is not known where they came from, although some have their suspicions that a smuggler must have landed his cargo at Oak or Cadboro Bay, both of which places are getting known as rendezvous of the illicit traders.

Rain on the Fraser.

Reports from New Westminster and points on the Fraser state that a steady downpour of rain has been going on there for three days and that in consequence considerable damage has been done to crops. Many of the farmers have large quantities of grain still standing, while in many fields the crops have been cut but not stacked. It is said that the loss in consequence will heavy.

The Marine Hospital.

The Marine Hospital just across the harbor has at present quite a number of occupants. For the most part they are sailors discharged from vessels which have come into Nanaimo and Burrard Inlet. Considering the numbers of vessels trading here, however, the list of invalids is not excessive. None of the complaints are of a serious nature, and the list which is now rather large will soon decrease.

The Seized North Star.

The little steamer North Star, seized some time ago for infractions of the customs laws, still lies moored near the wharf at the custom house. The evidence pertaining to her has for several months been before the authorities at Ottawa but no sign has been made by them as yet. The owners of the craft have about given up hope of ever regaining her again, and if they do she won't be worth much after the long lay up.

Wreckers and Wrecking.

Capt. Whitelaw, the veteran wrecker, goes to San Francisco to see after a new wrecking steamer which he is having built there. The new vessel is to be more than twice the size of the present Whitelaw, and will be fitted up with all the latest appliances for dealing with wrecked and disabled vessels. Capt. Whitelaw believes there is a good field on the eastern coast, and also in Australia for a properly fitted up wrecker, but as his interests are all centered in San Francisco he does not care to embark in enterprises in these quarters. The Alexander, which is being fitted as a whaler will carry pumping and hoisting gear, and can be used to advantage on wrecks of small vessels.

Handsome Premises.

Until a few years ago an attractive store, that is an elegantly fitted up one, was a thing not known in Victoria. Perhaps it was on account of the merchants having so much dealing with Indians. Things have changed however, and now this city can boast of some of the neatest small stores on the coast, as Victoria merchants have found out that an attractive store will draw the people. Others are following up and among them can well be mentioned the firm of Gilmore & McCandless, who are at present having handsome premises fitted up next to their old quarters. The main store is large and airy and separated from the rear department by a neat railing. An office is also being fitted for the convenience of the proprietors. These are only minor attractions in the new building, however, as a look up to the ceiling will tell that an artist has been at work there. The frescoing, which is not yet completed, is something elegant, richcolored flowers and ferns being shown to perfection. Taking all in all the new premises will be hard to beat in any of the coast cities.

BRIEF LOCALS.

The Day's Doings in City and Province Briefly Related.

New Westminster wants a new custom house building.

The regular fire drill for the department will be held to-night.

The bluejackets of the three ships now at Esquimalt are off on leave.

The excavations in the rear of the Telegraph block for large fire proof vaults are being gone on with rapidly.

The latest addition to the zoo is a cage containing three brace of quail the donation of H. E. Larry, of Port Angeles.

The recent heavy rains on the Mainland have had one good effect. The quenching of numerous forest fires is certainly a good thing.

The Comox miners have donated over $100 to the locked out Wellington miners. The Bricklayers Union of this city have also donated $9.25.

England's most popular summer drink is "Montserrat Pure Lime-Fruit Juice," which is now gaining the same favor here. Have you tried it?

A deal of repairing is being done to the sidewalks on Government street, new planks being put in where old ones have rotted away. If asphalt had been laid originally the repairs would have been unnecessary.

Notices are posted on the doors of several business offices which inform the public that the gentlemen who ordinarily do business within have gone from the city for a few days. The hunting season is now on.

Wm. Vaughan, of Chiselhurst, England, president of the Mexican Land Association, is at Ottawa on his way to the Pacific Coast where he will, if circumstances prove favorable, invest in Victoria, British Columbia, town property.

The skin of the panther lately shot at Kokstlah has been purchased by ex-Chief Ralney, of Tacoma, who will have it stuffed and mounted in his billiard parlors. Will the United States customs collect a duty on Canadian hides in this instance?

The Juvenile Templars of Esquimalt will give an entertainment in the Esquimalt Blue Ribbon Hall on Thursday evening, when a first-class programme will be presented. No doubt a bus will leave this city during the evening to convey those who wish to attend.

A meeting of the creditors of James D. Kelly, was held on Saturday at Westminster, when it was discovered that the assets of the firm amounted to about $2000, while the liabilities reached $2500. Messrs. W. & G. Wolfenden are the heaviest creditors, the amount being about $1200.

During last week about twenty carloads of canned salmon were shipped over the Canadian Pacific to different eastern houses. Each car contains on an average about 850 cases of salmon, which means that 7,000 cases in all have been shipped. The value of these is somewhere in the neighborhood of $70,000.

A. C. Fraser, logger, has returned from Cowichan Lake to-day, having contract with Hughitt & McIntyre, the new owners of the Sutton property. Mr. Fraser put over five million feet in the water at the head of the lake, and the obstructions are now being taken out of the river before driving to the mill begins.

On Saturday the locomotive No. 202 of the Great Northern and caboose were launched upon the large scow by which they were conveyed to Liverpool across the river from New Westminster. Another locomotive and a number of cars have left Winnipeg and are on the way, which when they arrive will be transhipped also to Liverpool.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and Elsewhere.

A dispatch from Independence, Iowa, says that Alabaster and Ray Wilkes each lowered a record there yesterday. Alabaster's performance was in the 4-year-old trot, in the second heat of which he won in 2.15, breaking the 4-year old stallion record. Ray Wilkes was sent to beat his record of 2.09, and broke another world's record, making the mile in 2.08¼.

WHEELMEN FROM ENGLAND.

Two gentlemen, Messrs. J. C. Piper and O. W. Bartlett, both bicyclists have arrived here from Plymouth, Eng., and will reside here permanently. They have brought their wheels, Rocket safeties, and will be welcomed by the Wanderers at the next meet. Byth are clever riders, and speak well of the roads about Victoria.

Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Trades' Assembly will be held this evening to discuss the advisability of sending a representative to Vancouver on labor day.

Change of Offices.

The city treasurer, surveyor, and inspector of buildings removed into their new quarters in the city hall addition to-day. The surveyor's old office will be used by Chief Deasy of the fire department.

Greer vs. Horne.

Mr. Justice Drake, to-day, gave judgment upon the appeal from the Registrar's order declaring the recognizances to be sufficient. His Lordship varied the order on the question of costs; directed some amendments of the recognizances; and otherwise held the recognizances to be sufficient.

A Close Shave.

A man belonging to this city, thinking he could not get along with his wife, hanged himself yesterday to a beam. After he was dead about an hour, it occurred to him that it might be his own fault in not providing for his home, that things went awry. He immediately cut himself down and obtained a nice library lamp and a Jubilee range at mclennan and mcfeely's, and everybody is happy.

MOORISH FANATICS.

The Strange, Wierd Dance They Often Indulge in.

The principal actors, between 20 and 30, though the number varied according to the inspiration of the moment, formed themselves into a square and commenced a frenzied dance. With heads uncovered, their long, black hair waving wildly in the wind, they tossed themselves hither and thither, throwing their bodies violently backward and forward, keeping up a fiendish yelling the whole time, and every now and then breaking out into the wildest shouts. Suddenly they ceased, and surrounded by all the crowd and followed by the tomtoms and pipes, above which their voices were distinctly heard they rushed on into the "Sôko," and there began the whole scene over again. I was watching them intently through good binoculars, and though I had been anxious to miss nothing, I saw in the end more than I desired. We had been told that it was customary to present them with a live sheep, which they tore limb from limb, and then and there, in its warm and quivering state, devoured. This seemed hardly credible, yet as I was looking, I distinctly saw, just after a great rush had been made to one spot, where previously three men had groveled on the ground, a tall, powerful fellow in a white garment, which was dyed from head to foot with blood, hold high up above the multitude a mangled carcass, which the next instant was flung out to the raving crowd. The glance had been brief, but sufficient to assure me that what I had heard was no myth, and as the people dispersed I observed that the garments of many others were also stained with blood. This was not the only unfortunate animal that was sacrificed that day in the self same manner, for these unbridled lunatics continued their horrid progress through the whole town, repeating their mad dances every hundred yards, and on other occasions an offering of the like kind was provided for them. They did not leave Tangier till the afternoon, and I shall never forget another scene that occurred as they came back. A woman, who had apparently not joined them before, came tearing down the hill in a perfect frenzy, and in her anxiety to be in time for some of the last performances she pitched headlong at the pace of an Atalanta. Suddenly a long scarf which was wound about her waist came off and flew into the road. Utterly unconscious of her loss she sped on, nearly knocking over several people in her way, and when she reached the returning throng she dashed aside even her fellow fanatics, and, throwing herself into the centre of the group, surpassed that all in her frantic evolutions. The madness of her movements knew no bounds; she raved like one distraught, and could only be compared to a hopeless lunatic. —Temple Bar.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
THE PUBLIC DECEIVED.

THERE IS A PARTY HERE CANVASSing for a book entitled "Heroes of the Dark Continent" which he is representing to be Stanley's book, this is false, and if you have subscribed for this trash you have been deceived into purchasing a practically unreliable book.

Stanley says once for all that these people cannot by any possibility publish anything of his but what they have dishonestly appropriated from his previous works. His own book will bear the title "In Darkest Africa," and will be published in two octavo volumes, containing about 1150 pages, 16 maps, 150 illustrations, and will bear on the title page the imprint of the Chas. Scribner's Sons and the Presbyterian News Co.
